African American Women's Health and Social Issues

Catherine Fisher Collins, EdD '90 & EdM '79 (Editor)

This updated edition focuses on diseases that pose the greatest threat to African American women. With contributions from a team of experts, including physicians, nurses, social workers, psychologists and chemists, the book covers such issues as heart disease, sickle cell anemia, breast cancer, diabetes, HIV and AIDS, as well as mental illness. Social issues affecting health are examined as well. (Greenwood Publishing Group, 2006)
