• "There is scarcely any profession in the commonwealth more necessary which is so slightly preformed," said Thomas Fuller, an English essayist of the early seventeenth century, speaking of the teaching profession. Years passed, and gradually the realization dawned that adequate training for "the goode school-master" was an integral part of the educational scheme. If we were to avoid the "blind leading the blind," we must provide an institution especially adapted to the preparation of those who are to guide the youth of the world.

Always a leader in educational endeavor, New York State was one of the first to establish means for a system of normal schools in which prospective teachers might receive the best training current at the time. That was in 1834. One hundred years have passed; towns have grown to cities; a rural population has changed to a conglomerate mass of largely urban workers.

New thousands of children are filling new thousands of schools, and the first normal school has grown to nine such institutions and two Teachers Colleges. 1934 marks the hundredth anniversary of the establishment of teacher education—a century of growth to which we feel we could no more fittingly dedicate our year book.

In doing this we represent not one State Teachers College, but all of our sister schools throughout the state. As they and their leaders have all been a part of the advancement of the teaching profession, so, too, have they, through their contributions, helped make this volume a chronology of not one college, but of all those in New York State who have chosen "to seek the truth, and then in a spirit of love pass it on."

MISS CATHERINE REED

MR. RAYMOND FRETZ

• The Class of 1935 . . . not long ago the phrase was but a dream, an ideal of future accomplishment; in a short time it will be but a memory of comradeship and endeavor. To the uninterested observer, perhaps, the progress made by the Class of '35 has shown no astounding record of attainment; but to those inevitably influenced by its growth, the changes and achievements have been many and varied.

This graduating class is the first bona fide graduating group from the new building, as it was the first Freshman class to enter the new home of the State Teachers College at Buffalo. In 1931 the campus was a sticky, clay covered quagmire, as undeveloped as the Freshman minds, and the class and the campus have grown in character together. Not only the first to enter, it can also claim the doubtful distinction of a group seeking training for careers during a world-wide depression, handicapped in individual ambitions by an upset social system. This influenced the class as a whole, and helped to build up more worthy ideals and criteria in education. It has also seen the change for its own members from the old two year training standards to the four year requirements, which place them, and their successors, on an equal basis with university graduates.

The first major problem for the class was the election of officers at the close of the Junior year. They chose Cornelia Burzynski, Florence Conroy, Edith Morse, and Willard Hiltz. The abolition of Student Government made it necessary for the Seniors to guide the student activities of the college. Then, too, the committees for graduation, "Elms" publication, and placement problems became important duties, with the added task of conducting the Senior assemblies every week.

As the final year draws to a close, they look out on a new environment, and pause to look back over their own education, and teacher education in the past century. Their four years have been the present expression, and their future work will be the practical furthering, of these changes. There is a great place in the society of today for the realization of their education; and they leave the challenge of this to classes following them, that they may even better fit themselves for life in their own education.

THE CLASS OF 1936

• For three years the "intelligentsia of the Class of '36" anticipated that social highlight known as the Junior Prom. December 21, and the ballroom of Hotel Fillmore brought the climax to their anticipation so that now they look back on it as eagerly as they did forward.

What would have happened to the Freshman class without their Junior sisters and brothers? The answer to that supposition will never be known because the Class of '36 took efficient care of the neophyte Frosh.

For the third consecutive year the Juniors had to be content with a second best rating in the Inter-Class Sing. Let it not be said, however, that their efforts were not persistent. Granted that the Class of '36 is consistent and persistent, our "hats go off" to the Class of '37. On February 14, the Junior class celebrated the survival of mid-semester exams with a Valentine party in the Practice School gym.

Our third year at State has passed. We have moved up and already a feeling of dignity begins to envelop us. Before we completely emerge from our present selves, however, may we extend a vote of thanks to our Class Officers, Ralph Eggleston, Dorothy Kuhn, Kay Johnston, and Thelma Hubbard.

THE CLASS OF 1937

• With a year of experience and an abundance of newly acquired wisdom we arrived on the scene in September under the title Sophomores. Our first enterprise was the task of guiding (a mild expression) the Freshmen through Freshman Daze. Court scenes were enacted, "justice" was levied, and we seemed to successfully exert our power until a bunch of athletic stalwarts temporarily surpassed our Sophomore strength by pulling us through the Lily Pond in Delaware Park. We displayed our good spirit, however, by our reception to the Freshmen in the form of a dance.

Our energies were soon diverted in a new direction as the calendar warned us of the approach of the Inter-Class Sing. Musical brains were raked for novel arrangements, and we came through with a Fred Waring arrangement of College Days which, on the fatal day, enabled us to win the coveted pennant. We will ever sing the praises of Cleon "Eddie Duchin" Service who, with Harold Nissensson, wrote the take-off, as well as the feminine sextette which harmonized so superbly.

Our Sophomore Sweater Dance was held in the spring and, to the surprise of all, sweaters and knickers were in the majority.

This was followed by our big event, a Class Party, which climaxed our Sophomore activities and lent a joyousness to the realization that we are rapidly maturing and soon to become Juniors.

Before we depart from our present state however, we wish to acknowledge the excellent leadership of our Class Officers, Paul Coleman, Anna Lou Marks, Edith Lawless, and Raye Conrad, our helmsman for two years.

CLASS OF 1938

• A new school, new faces, and new ideas (by lecture giverovers) all greeted us on our first day at State. Our Big Sisters in the Junior class came to our rescue however, and a picnic in Delaware Park revived us sufficiently to look forward to future events. (Hardboiled eggs work wonders at times.) The Freshman camps even made some of us feel that in a short time we would be "green" no longer.

However, just as we were emerging from the fog which surrounds every Frosh, along came our Sophomore friends with their Freshman Daze program. Perhaps we had better admit it dazed us a trifle but not enough to dim our enjoyment of it.

We felt the need of leadership throughout our ordeals and when Election time arrived, Paul Frank, Gertrude Van Arsdale, Ralph Goodrich, and Ruth Haensel were chosen to head our ranks for the year.

"All play and no work" soon had to be revised to its correct form as the Warning season approached. After safely passing our first Slough of Despond we turned our attention to Athletics. Tryouts in all forms of competition produced Herman "Tiny" Schartz, our basketball center, Perry and Newman on the swimming team, John Walsh in wrestling, while Del Costello succeeded in placing on the diving squad.

All in all, therefore we feel that the year has been successful, and plans are already being made for better times next year.

HISTORY OF THE ELMS

• If, after reviewing the events of the past year, we see the creation of several "new traditions," we may at the same time remember those which have earned our careless veneration through their long standing existence. One of the most outstanding of these is the Senior Yearbook which has served since its inauguration as no other agency could to mirror and record the history of collegiate activities.

In 1912 when a small group of venturesome students planned the publication of an annual yearbook to "recall the events of the school year," they had perhaps, no more than a fond hope that this initial "Volume 1," would be the first of a long series of "Elms." The most serious problem at that time and for many years thereafter was the financing of the publication. Subscriptions were for the most part tentative and there were no means of foretelling exactly how much financial support would be received. One thing however, was certain, that the amount would not be sufficient to meet the demands of the budget. To alleviate the risk and lack of funds, the staff sponsored tag days, dances, candy sales, and other money-getting activities, which too often failed to meet the inevitable demands of engravers, printers, and photographers. Finally the student body voted to increase their blanket tax so as to include the "Elms" under their sheltering wings, and the board of today looks back with wonder and respect at those former financiers who managed so ably in their unsure monetary policy that they had behind them a surplus sufficient to purchase one of the bells for the clock tower chimes of the new Administration Building.

In the early "Elms" a preponderance of literary material was characteristic as compared to the issues of more recent years, with class histories, class orations, and poetry. The Seniors were merely distinguished by two group pictures, one entitled "Seniors A-F," the other "Seniors G-O." The Normal Basketball team, posing in graceful half-sitting, half-lying attitudes was the only athletic group represented.

Time and space force us to hurry over the changes of the intervening years during which the new Normal grew old, a new State Teachers College was created, and the "Elms" gradually grew in size and prestige. In 1924 the contents of the annual were divided and arranged in the order common to recent publications. Extra-curriculars had increased so rapidly that for the sake of clarity they were placed under such headings as Publications, Athletics, and Sororities.

The feelings of the first staff cannot be better phrased than by repeating their own modest statement. "The Editors realize the shortcomings of this pioneer volume, but we trust that our critics will be lenient. We are sure that each succeeding volume will excel its predecessors until the 'Elms' takes its place among the best school annuals." We too, are cognizant of the many faults of our "Elms" of 1935, and present it, not as a fulfillment of that first prophecy, but as a milestone erected as a monument to a specific stage development toward its fulfillment.

THE RECORD

• The "Record" was founded in May, 1913, as a quarterly publication. Since then it has grown gradually until now, 1300 copies are printed each week of the school year.

During the past year, the "Record" has covered the field of college news most successfully. Not only did the paper serve the best interests of the students in the regular business of gathering and publishing the news, but it also has been instrumental in bringing about improvements at the college.

This year, through the efforts of the editor, Walter Van Buren, many noteworthy improvements have been made in the "Record." Chief among these improvements are: the addition of Collegiate Digest; the new Alumni column; the use of more photographs; and the inauguration of a News Bulletin Service. The Collegiate Digest has given us a glimpse of the collegiate world, of which we are but a small part. The Alumni column has kept us in touch with the activities of many of our former students. The wide variety of pictures that have been printed in the "Record" have brightened the paper, and served to enliven interest in college happenings. The use of so many pictures would have been impossible on the regular blanket tax appropriation, but for the cooperation of the Buffalo Evening News and the Buffalo Times. The newly established News Bulletin Service has been a worthy supplement to the regular columns of the paper, and many last minute items would have been missed by the students had it not been for this service. We hope it will remain a regular feature in the future.

MUSICAL ORGANIZATIONS

• One of the items which will have recurring frequency in any discussion of current social problems, is that of the use of leisure time, and it is generally conceded that music and art will have a prominent part in the solution of this problem.

Right in step, then, with modern social trends, is the development on our campus of a group of musical organizations which seek to stimulate musical expression in a variety of forms and to have, not only many opportunities for appreciative enjoyment, but a large percentage of actual participation. That they succeed in this is well shown in the extra-curricular survey which indicated that more students are participating in musical organizations than in any other extra-curricular activity.

From the first of the year's programs, beginning with the Stephen Foster program in the fall, to the last, with Commencement Exercises in June, they call forth an enthusiastic response. Nor is their popularity confined to our college walls, for we have had a prize winning Glee Club which has received first place in competition with Cornell, Syracuse, University of Buffalo, Keuka and other Western New York college women's glee clubs.

The band has stimulated the appeal of athletic contests and the orchestra increased the enjoyment of Assemblies and dramatic performances. Men's Glee Club and Junior Women's Glee Club have helped to make the year's program a success.

What they have achieved has been due not only to their own efforts but also to the unflagging enthusiasm and the capable direction they enjoy in the leadership of the faculty of the Music Department, Miss Hurd, Miss Speir, and Miss MacMahon.

For increased musical enjoyment to State we hope that a policy similar to that which has been carried on before, will be pursued, and we are certain that such a program will ensure continued success.

"THE YORK NATIVITY"

THE CHARACTERS AT WORK

● "What is the preparation of the actor for his 'first night' appearance?" The answer to this question is to be found by following the actor from the time he becomes a member of the cast to the presentation of the finished performance.

Upon receiving his role, the actor reads the play to acquire a working knowledge of the character he is to portray. He must realize the mind of his character at work, picture him in numerous situations other than those in the play, acquaint himself with the idiosyncrasies of his role, and conform his voice and carriage to the character. A complete character study is necessary to a convincing characterization. In case of unforeseen circumstances occurring during a performance, a complete understanding of the character's philosophy will enable an actor to improvise convincingly. An excellent example of improvisation was given in last Spring Play. The king called for his Major-General, and after a reasonable length of time had elapsed and no Major presented himself, the king ad libbed for fully three minutes until the Major's arrival.

A true characterization is achieved through constant thought, conferences with directors, and many reading rehearsals. Once the character is conceived in the mind of the performer, the play is ready for regular rehearsal.

First rehearsals are usually taken in scenes. Each scene is carefully analyzed for dramatic sequence, possibilities, and climaxes. Parts of each scene are rehearsed separately to insure a convincing delivery. After each individual scene has been rehearsed as a single unit, the play is ready for continuity.

The connecting of these units into one solid performance is known as "developing continuity." Its chief purposes are to establish a sense of unity in the actors' minds, to connect these individual scenes into a complete script, to weave together all plots, and to show the connections between these plots. It is by this means that all climaxes are made clear, and all important scenes are visualized in their true relations.

After the group rehearsals are unified, the actors are ready for the physical aids of production (costumes, make-up, properties, lights, and scenery). A few rehearsals are undertaken with full equipment to insure the acquaintance of the actors with their surroundings. It is by the means of this local color that the final touches are able to be added. The spirit in these properties gives to the characters just the tinge of realism necessary to make their characters real, and forceful.

The play is now ready for a final dress rehearsal. The fact that this is the last opportunity for the director to clear any discrepancies, or change any features makes this the highlight of the rehearsal period. It is Miss Goossen's custom to hold one uninterrupted dress rehearsal, and to follow it with final criticisms. In this way she assures herself that the play is natural and unrestricted. This rehearsal gives the characters the confidence which so aids in the success of the "first night."

The final production—the first night performance—is the triumph of these weeks and months of continuous rehearsal. There is a sense of real satisfaction when the Curtain Falls.

MEN'S CLUB

The development of an appreciation of human values is not left to chance among the men at college. Such organizations as the Men's Club have for their fundamental aim the promotion of a spirit of fellowship, and help to provide the spark which leads to enduring friendships and life-long associations. Men's Club brings these desirable results through gym meetings, social gatherings, and dinners. At some of these gatherings the members of the faculty give addresses that are followed by enthusiastic discussions.

ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION 1934-35

• The Athletic Association of which each student is a member promotes and manages all athletic activity in the college and fosters a spirit of sportsmanship and friendliness on the campus.

The new year has found State more sport "conscious" than ever before. All athletic activities have felt this quickening enthusiasm on the part of both student body and faculty.

Swimming, soccer and golf have ventured into the field of intercollegiate competition. Great interest has been shown in boxing, wrestling and cross-country. In particular has the basketball team felt the uplift in college athletic spirit and that spirit has served to inspire them on to the State Championship of Teacher Training Institutions. So great was the attendance at games that even the new bleachers designed by Mr. Perkins were scarcely adequate to provide for the overflow crowds.

To provide for the enlarged scope of athletic activity a committee under the chairmanship of Nel Upton formulated a new constitution for the Association.

With the continued interest and cooperation of students and faculty, the athletic future of State seems assured of success.

FRANCIS DAVIES (captain), forward

ARTHUR MICHLIN, guard

BASKETBALL

1934-1935

• State has at last found its place in the college basketball sun. For the first time in many years, a team of real college caliber represented us on the courts. Displaying a high-class brand of ball backed up with plenty of fight our club ran through a schedule of fourteen games in a victory march stopped only by those heart-rending losses to the powerful Mont eagles from Niagara University.

In winning the mythical Teacher Training School Championship the team convincingly avenged last season's defeats at the hands of such good teams as Ithaca College, Cortland and Brockport. Playing to capacity crowds both at home and on the road, State served notice that her Sophomore team will menace Western New York colleges for at least two more years. Since overwhelming victories over the normal schools have proved our team to be of college rating, next year will find us competing against more and more teams in this class.

Those two Niagara games in which gallant State rallies fell short by three points and one point have only served to whet our appetite for next year's contests with the purple-clad men of "Taps" Gallagher.

For the first time, State placed men on All-Western New York teams. Honors fell to "Art" Michlin, picked as first team guard on the Courier-Express team and "Stan" Raiman being picked for a guard position on The Buffalo Evening News team. High Herman Schwarz, Pugnacious Paul Coleman and "Fancy Dan" Zwick received honorable mention. The work of Captain "Fran" Davies and "Bobby" Reist commands space at this time. Reist especially came on fast at the end of the season and made his presence felt mostly in that hectic game at Geneseo. Davies, Hickey, and Earl Griswold played their last in the Fredonia game, ending four years of competition on State teams.

STANLEY RAIMAN, guard

HERMANN SCHWARZ, center

DAVID ZWICK, forward

Much credit is due Mr. Coyer for his work in assembling and directing the fortunes of the team and both for his sake and State's may future years be even more bright.

SWIMMING

• Rome wasn't built in a day nor can it be expected that an inexperienced swimming team can come into full-fledged existence in a single season. In the process of expanding from an intermural to an intercollegiate basis, State's first swimming team suffered from the proverbial "growing pains."

Under the instruction of graduate coach John Butler, the team worked faithfully in their effort to compensate for circumstance and an only too apparent lack of material.

To State's team goes the distinction of bringing the first intercollegiate swimming meet ever held in Buffalo right to our campus. This meet, with the University of Toronto, and subsequent duals with such formidable opponents as Niagara, Cornell, and McMasters (Canada) University finally establish swimming on a permanent basis. The fact that several of these schools decisively defeated State's goldfish does not detract one iota from the credit due Captain Albert Kreinheder and his teammates for their fine efforts and finer spirit in behalf of State's first tank team.

The prospect for smoother sailing on next year's swimming "ship of State" takes on a rose hue when one considers that State's lineup is studded with Freshmen. With the splendid spirit of co-operation shown by Miss Houston and Mr. Coyer in support of the team, this embryonic sport at State will prove its worth as it is given time to grow.

GIRLS' ATHLETICS 1934-35

● Basketball is the major sport for girls at State. This year twelve section teams from all classes have competed in two series of games: an upper class series and a Freshman series. The winners of the two groups play for a section championship decision. From these section teams girls are chosen for four class teams. The Freshmen play the Sophomores and the Juniors play the Seniors with the winners playing for the class championship. The final game of the year is that between the Orange and the Black which teams are chosen from the best players on all the teams. Playing in this game is the highest basketball honor a girl may achieve.

Badminton is one of the newer sports arousing much interest among the girls. This year three tournaments will be run; girls' singles, girls' doubles and mixed doubles.

A tennis tournament in the fall brought out the best players in this sport although tennis is offered in the spring as well.

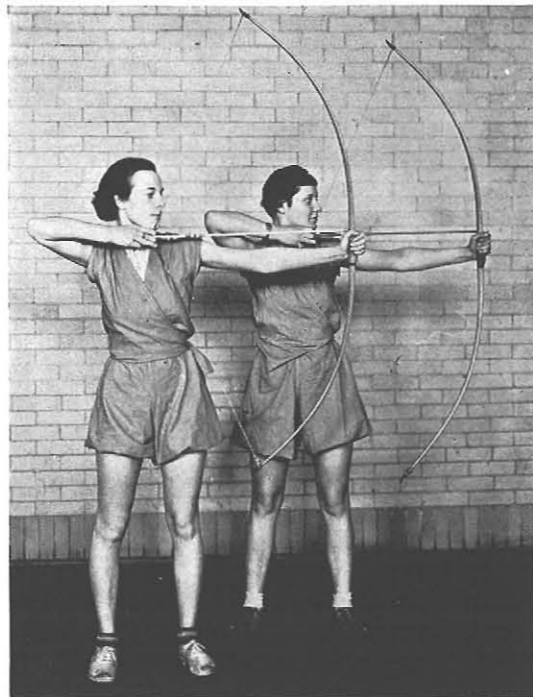

Archery, too, has its devotees. State has placed well in several intercollegiate telegraphic archery meets as well as having its top archers gain recognition in local meets.

The climax of the year in swimming is the girls' meet in May in which events are run off for the novices who have learned to swim in their Freshman year, and also for the more experienced swimmers. Our goal is: every Freshman a swimmer by the end of her first year. The swimming picture shows those advanced swimmers who are qualifying for the Red Cross Life Saving Certificate.

To round out our extensive program we offer in addition to these sports, soccer, horseback riding, playground ball and table tennis.
