DIRECTOR'S NOTES

As we head into the '80s, one cliché symptomatic of our times abounds: "You can't really be sure of anything anymore." And as disquieting as that may be to our grandparents, we seem to adjust as well as we can — often surprising ourselves. This is truly an age of transition — careers can rise and fall within a television season, to say nothing of a baseball season, and one no more gets used to the punk rock look than it is immediately passé. Roller disco . . . computer game . . . test tube babies . . . and fast-food croissants from France. So you shake your head, smile, and say, "Look. You can't really be sure of anything anymore."

The theatre has been changing, too. The influence of film and television on our aesthetic sensibility is more direct than we might imagine. When a well-made play is performed these days — say, a revival of an elegant Lillian Hellman effort — it seems to be the exception more than the rule. Plays still have a beginning, a middle, and an end, but we have become so used to jump-cuts and fast edits from film, that when we sit in our seats in the theatre, we are finally ready for anything.

And a very good thing, too. Because theatre, which can entertain us and even educate us, must also astonish us. For nothing stays the same forever — even baseball, perhaps the most formal of all American sports, and the only team sport not played to a clock, has felt the impact of the media, and the reverberations of big business and advertising.

And LADY OF THE DIAMOND? Well, perhaps it might be easier to define it by defining what it is not. Because it's not just about baseball, and it's not just about the women's movement, and it's not just about sacred American institutions. It's about all of those things, of course, and finally mostly about men and women. And human potential. Well, look. It's theatre. And you can't really be sure of anything anymore.

JOEL POLLIS Willie

Mr. Polis abandoned a budding pitching career in the summer of '62 when a rival from Camp Tuckahoe blew him off the field with a dazzling array of tosses that won the league championship for Tuckahoe. However, he soon won a scholarship in gymnastics to USC and there began a serious affair with the theatre. In New York City, he has performed at Playwright's Horizons, the Phoenix Company's Marymount Theatre, and created the role of Jerry Stein in the Off-Broadway hit FAMILY BUSINESS at the Astor Place Theatre. Last season, he played the young actor in Mamet's A LIFE IN THE THEATRE and Tom Kent in the American premiere of David French's JITTERS at the Long Wharf Theatre. His other regional credits include Rodney in BOY MEETS GIRL, Simon, the Olympic diving medalist in Martin Sherman's PASSING BY, Patroclus in TROILUS AND CRESSIDA, and Nick, the lascivious bellhop in Joe Orton's WHAT THE BUTLER SAW. Mr. Polis is a graduate of the Yale School of Drama and like all native Philadelphians a die-hard Phillies fan.

Duke McGuire, Studio Arena's technical consultant for LADY OF THE DIAMOND has added coaching to his long list of accomplishments in professional sports. Mr. McGuire, Director of Promotion and Marketing for the Buffalo Bisons and former pro ballplayer, has been teaching the cast of SAT's latest world premiere the rudiments of America's favorite sport. Buffalo-born McGuire began his baseball career at Amherst High. Drafted by the New York Mets, he decided instead to attend Cornell University. After a season there, he was again drafted, this time by the Pittsburgh Pirates. He transferred to SUNYAB, and in 1972 was drafted by the Detroit Tigers. Duke spent three years in the Tigers' organization, playing in the outfield and at first base, before his promising career was curtailed by injury. He returned to his home town to coach at Bishop Neumann High, and has managed the Niagara Falls Pirates of the New York-Penn League. He keeps his skills sharpened by playing for the Voyagers of the Buffalo Muni League, whom he helped to the 1979 National Amateur Baseball Federation Championship.
