The work of the Council on Nursing Education on differentiation of roles between baccalaureate and associate degree graduates was another outstanding product of this department. However, more direct intervention on the part of the Executive Director might have prevented misunderstandings surrounding the above document among staff, Board of Directors, and the Council.

B. Board Relations

The Executive Director effectively and efficiently provides staff assistance to the Board and Board Committees. Minutes are accurate, actions are tracked and implemented, and advice is given during meetings when requested and appropriate. There are, however, specific concerns that must be addressed.

Efforts on the part of the Executive Director to maintain clearly delineated roles are especially important. The implementation of shared responsibilities between volunteers and staff should be openly discussed, negotiated, and clarified as needed. The Executive Director can be an effective gatekeeper in maintaining balanced relationships between staff and the Board. It is our expectation that the Executive Director will facilitate a positive climate for timely communication, continue to maintain confidentiality, and utilize appropriate support systems.

The Executive Director’s flexibility in adapting to frequent changes in elected officers enhances effective shared governance. This shared governance will be improved by the ongoing clarification of the interdependent roles.

Communications/Public Relations/Publications

The membership has responded positively to the improved quality of the Association’s publications. We encourage continued efforts to involve volunteers in the decision-making process related to the development of new materials.

Responses to media inquiries regarding current, controversial, professional issues should be generated by professional nurses only. Mechanism allowing in place to ensure professional interpretation of issues and organizational policy must continue to be reinforced.

Legislative Program

The Executive Director has acknowledged the need to assess the effectiveness of the legislative program. The level of Legislative activities and improvement is inconsistent throughout the state. Areas needing improvement include:
Coordination between NYSNA staff and CNA legislative committees, timely dissemination of legislative information to districts, a more aggressive and visible legislative image for NYSNA, and continuously updated information on "Leg Line." Concerted efforts are needed to include NYSNA in statewide health issues and broaden the scope of our legislative focus.

Constituent Affairs/External Relations

The Executive Director should continue to maintain positive working relationships with other nursing organizations and community groups. Improved verbal and nonverbal communication that reflects openness and sensitivity to various professional situations will enhance and strengthen the image of NYSNA. The Executive Director's role includes participation in numerous meetings and ceremonial events; a strong professional image contributes to positive outcomes. Inherent in this strong professional image is the exercise of mature judgment and the objective appraisal of problematic situations.

In summary, the Executive Director continues to manage the affairs of this Association successfully in these critical, challenging times. She demonstrates the talent and potential for further development in this role. Attention to areas needing improvement, as identified by the Board, will promote continued refinement of executive skills and will contribute to the smooth and efficient operations of the Association.

RE: Comments on Draft Job Description and Sample Evaluation Forms

General areas to be addressed:

Leadership
- Role with BOD
- Planning for Association and organizational goals
- Spokesperson for profession
- Representative for organizational positions
- Role model
- Separate management issues from implementation of policies
- Provides for internal review of all programs (progress, quality)

Communication
- Seeks to maintain open communication, maintains harmony

Staff Performance

Field Service - needs clarification

Accountability
- Annual written report to President
- Interval record keeping

Job Description - Appendix C

Look at groupings for possible additions to Job Description

1. Continuing education
2. Job knowledge - assumes initiative in developing awareness of changes within nursing and health care industry
Other additions:

- Analytic ability - able to analyze situations and problems from numerous points of reference
- Communication skills - written and oral conform to acceptable standards of speech and written skills
- Leadership - demonstrates ability to assume responsibility in a variety of situations with maximum effectiveness
- Personal qualities -
  - Open minded and skilled in listening
  - Sensitive to and considerate of others
  - Demonstrates integrity and loyalty
  - Manifests good judgement
  - Possesses the ability to get along with people
  - Accepts constructive criticism well
  - Manifests good grooming and a pleasant experience
  - Displays vigor, energy, and enthusiasm

I think the job description is adequate, certainly a very good beginning if this is the first one in writing. I do think it is more task oriented than functional. Many of the "functions" listed are actually evaluation criteria. I would suggest a discussion of the subcommittee next time we are together to decide if a task oriented job description is the way we want to go. If not, we should create more definitive categories which represent major functional areas.

Specific areas which I would like to see added include:

- Role in long range planning
- Role in establishing priorities with BOD
- Role in advising BOD in future direction
- Role as state leader of organized nursing

I believe the Nursing House system seems the easiest and cleanest to use for evaluation. The other numerical ones seem unwieldy.

I have reviewed the draft of the Executive Director position description, and I believe that it is most satisfactory and accurately describes the duties and responsibilities of the position.

I have also reviewed the sample evaluation forms that you sent me. One labeled "Performance Appraisal," calling for a narrative response, I do not believe is suitable for our purposes.

Dear Juanita:

I will, of course, be pleased to respond to all issues or concerns raised by the Board of Directors, and will do so prior to the May 18-19 Board of Directors' meeting.

However, as you know, the informal conversation which we had on Friday, March 18th, following the close of the Board meeting was quite broad in scope. I respectfully request that you provide me with a written list of the Board's concerns so that I may prepare a full and appropriate response.

Sincerely,

I have reviewed the draft of the Executive Director position description, and I believe that it is most satisfactory and accurately describes the duties and responsibilities of the position.

I have also reviewed the sample evaluation forms that you sent me. One labeled "Performance Appraisal", calling for a narrative response, I do not believe is suitable for our purposes.

"Staff-Evaluation", check-off form with space for comments, would appear to be the most suitable of the forms under review. It is task and responsibility specific, provides for a range of responses as well as specific comments.

"Appendix C", with changes could be used, but I believe that it is far less specific than "Staff-Evaluation".

"Director's Performance Review", with changes, could be used, but it lacks the direct specific components contained in "Staff-Evaluation".

"Evaluation Checklist", is good only for the process it outlines.

Madeline was supposed to do a cut and paste of an evaluation form and circulate it to our committee. I had waited, hoping to receive it prior to sending you my comments, however, it has not arrived and time is short.

Re: Task Group for Development of Evaluation Form for Executive Director

At our May meeting we completed the tasks of developing a tentative time frame and making initial task assignments.

The tentative time frame developed was as follows:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Task</th>
<th>By Whom</th>
<th>Date</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1. Review current job description and redesign</td>
<td>M. Orr</td>
<td>July 15</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2. Critique Job Description</td>
<td>Task Group</td>
<td>-</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3. Review Evaluation forms and compare with new job description</td>
<td>Task Group</td>
<td>before Sept. Board Meeting</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5. Finalize Evaluation Form</td>
<td>Task Group</td>
<td>before Oct. Board Meeting</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6. Approval of Evaluation Form</td>
<td>Board of Directors</td>
<td>October Board Meeting</td>
</tr>
</tbody>

Committee members have indicated that step 2 and 3 can be completed individually with the possibility of having a conference call before the September Board meeting if necessary. May I suggest that each member review the job description which was sent to you and the evaluation forms previously mailed to you and then forward your results to me by September 7.

I will then collate the results. A conference call could then be scheduled on September 13. This would still allow time for preparation of the preliminary report for the board. This is a tight schedule, however I think we can complete our task before convention.

Thank you for your help in directing our work.

Re: Evaluation Tool for Executive Director

As you may remember during the Executive Session of the NYNSA Board meeting on March 17, the board approved an ad hoc committee to develop a tool to be used in evaluating the executive director. Our first task was to explore and to gather available tools and other related materials.

I am forwarding to you the extent of my investigation thus far. I would suggest that if any of you have materials that you also do the same. Our plan is that all of these materials can then be examined before our next board meeting. I would think that we should not delay the executive session so that we may then present a plan to the board. Please call me if you have other ideas or suggestions.

MANAGEMENT ACCOUNTABILITY PROGRAM

Purpose

Development of the Association's Management Accountability Program involves development of procedures, guides, and forms for planning and performance appraisal. The program builds on past and present operational success.

Program Description

The Management Accountability Program will provide a framework for strengthening objective-based planning, evaluation and organization. It will provide useful tools to leadership seeking to focus resources on critical objectives. The program's ultimate goal is to ensure that planning and management efforts achieve their intended purposes.

Major Components of the Program

- In objective-based, member-centered and aware of costs.
- Flows from the Board and CEO to the management team and all levels of staff.
- Allows for formative and summative evaluation of progress toward critical objectives.
- Refines the association's operational planning systems.
- Provides for the evaluation of management performance in achieving objectives, fulfilling position responsibilities and demonstrating essential performance competencies.
- Specifies the roles, responsibilities and relationships of positions involved in the management accountability program.
Management Accountability Program

Program Objectives

1. To develop and implement a Management Accountability Program by:
   a. Developing a system for planning, formative and summative evaluation of critical objectives.
   b. Developing procedures, guides and forms for evaluation of the performance of staff providing leadership to efforts.

2. To enhance the leadership roles, capabilities and effectiveness of:
   a. The Board
   b. The CEO
   c. Department Administrators and Professional Staff

3. To establish a results-oriented planning process that:
   a. Focuses attention and available resources on critical objectives
   b. Coordinates association planning efforts
   c. Monitors progress toward critical objectives
   d. Promotes positive action with minimum paperwork
   e. Contributes to the quality of services received by the membership.

The program will result in:

a. The management tools needed by the Association to ensure that planning occurs and achieves its purposes.
b. The specification of roles, responsibilities and relationships among positions involved in the Management Accountability Program.
c. A coordinated "MBO" system useful for both formative and summative evaluation of progress toward established critical objectives.
d. A performance evaluation program for professional staff that assesses progress toward objectives, fulfillment of position responsibilities and demonstration of essential professional competencies.

critical objectives, standards of achievement and action plans for the association, each department, each office and each position will be developed, coordinated and monitored by the program.

The system will, next year, be coordinated to annual and longer range budgeting.
Introduction

The primary purposes of the Management Accountability Program of the

- provide direction to the efforts of all organizational units
- enhance the effectiveness of association services to its members
- coordinate national, regional and local actions

The system described in this publication has been designed to --

1. guide the development of objectives for all departments and programs
2. facilitate the monitoring and reporting of progress made toward the achievement of objectives
3. provide an "early warning system" for key events not proceeding as planned
4. allow for adjustment of objectives and plans as necessary
5. coordinate the assessment of accomplishments, identification of problems and development of objectives for the succeeding year

This publication was developed by a project team, composed of association staff and specialists. It recognized the significant accomplishments of the association to date and builds upon these efforts. It seeks to blend useful present practices with approaches designed to foster new achievements.

A major component of this program is the Management-by-Objectives System. Administrators prepare action plans. The completed action plans serve as a basic form for the Performance Appraisal which also includes review of job responsibilities and professional competencies.

BOARD SELF-EVALUATION

DIRECTIONS: This questionnaire presents 40 statements about Board and board member responsibilities which the Board believes are important to the effective governance of the organization.

Some questions relate only to the Board as a total group. Other questions relate to both the Board as a group and to each individual board member. When a question relates to both the group and individuals, the response area is divided in half so that a rating can be given for each.

The questionnaire is to be completed by each board member. All questionnaires will be forwarded for tabulation. The tabulator will provide a summary of responses that indicates how many people chose each possible rating for each numbered statement.

A Board self-evaluation should be conducted as part of a comprehensive performance evaluation system that considers:

- progress toward predetermined objectives
- fulfillment of job responsibilities
- demonstration of professional competencies

This system should link the organization’s planning, program evaluation and staff performance appraisal activities.

Areas of Responsibility

13. Participates actively in community affairs.

14. Channels all concerns, complaints and criticisms of the organization through the CEO for study with the expectation that she/he will report back to the board if action is required.

15. Seeks to prevent unjust criticism of the CEO from vocal special interest groups and defend the CEO when unjust and criticism is voiced.

16. Encourages open participation in an advisory capacity in the solution of specific problems.

17. Is aware of community attitudes and the special interest groups which seek to influence the organization's programs.

C. Board Meetings

18. Has established written procedures for conducting meetings including ample provision for interested parties to be heard but prevents a single individual or group from dominating discussions.

19. Conducts its meetings in facilities that allow the organization's business affairs to be conducted by the board and its staff effectively.

20. Selects a chairman on the basis of his or her ability to properly conduct a meeting.

21. New items of a complex nature are not introduced for action if they are not listed on the agenda but are presented for listing on a subsequent agenda.

22. Definitive action is withheld until asking if there is a staff recommendation and what it is.

23. Good judgment is used in criticizing a staff recommendation.

24. The privilege of holding over matters for further study is not abused.

25. Each member makes sincere effort to be informed on all agenda items listed prior to the meeting.

26. Controversial, complex or complicated matters are held over or placed on the agenda for discussion only, prior to consideration for adoption.

MY BOARD AND I -- HOW THOROUGH AND EFFICIENT?

A self-survey of perceptions about board roles and functions.

READ THIS FIRST, PLEASE:

1. Please complete the entire questionnaire. Respond to each item by circling either A, B, C, D, or E to indicate the degree to which your board, or you as an individual board member, meet(s) each criterion (see the Response Key, below).

2. Answer all the questions with candor, stressing strengths as well as weaknesses. You need not sign your name.

RESPONSE KEY: The board, or you as a board member --

A always or totally meet(s) criterion
B usually or mostly meet(s) criterion
C occasionally or to a fair degree meet(s) criterion
D seldom or to a small degree meet(s) criterion
E never or to no degree meet(s) criterion

A Board self-evaluation should be conducted as part of a comprehensive performance evaluation system that considers:

- progress toward predetermined objectives
- fulfillment of job responsibilities
- demonstration of professional competencies

This system should link the organization's planning, program evaluation and staff performance appraisal activities.
I. LEGAL RESPONSIBILITIES
About The Board:

A B C D E  The board conducts its business in a manner which conforms to applicable laws and regulations.

A B C D E  The board enjoys an active and positive relationship with an attorney who specializes in areas particularly relevant to the organization.

About You, The Board Member:

A B C D E  You are familiar with the board's role and responsibilities as defined by law and organization policy.

II. THE BOARD AND ITS MEETINGS
About The Board:

A B C D E  The board calls only meetings or work sessions that are necessary.

A B C D E  The board has developed an adequate planning mechanism for determining agendas and having back-up reports and briefing papers prepared for study before meeting time.

A B C D E  The board has developed a clear policy as to the kinds of matters which need not be brought to the board's attention and which may be handled by administrative action.

A B C D E  The board chairperson and the chief executive officer confer before each meeting to review the upcoming business, clarify agenda items and anticipate possible problems.

About You, The Board Member:

A B C D E  You do your homework and come to the meetings prepared to contribute to discussions, without wasting time by asking for information that has already been provided.

III. THE BOARD AND POLICY DEVELOPMENT
About The Board:

A B C D E  The board regards policymaking as an ongoing, never ending responsibility.
The board has a policy manual which employs an easy-to-use codification system and is kept up-to-date.

The board encourages and has an adequate mechanism that permits the involvement of staff and other interested parties in the development of policy proposals.

The board provides the CEO with the opportunity to develop policy proposals, and does not write "instant policy" under the gun of emergencies or without giving due notice to staff and other interested parties that policy is impending.

The policy manual is available through the organization and all who have a need to know have free and easy access to policy information.

All copies of the policy manual are recalled by the central office annually to be checked for accuracy of content.

About You, The Board Member:

You are familiar with the board's major policies.

Once policy is adopted you adhere to it and leave the implementation of policy to the administrative staff.

You request periodic reviews of specific policies if current issues and trends appear to warrant a change.

IV. THE BOARD AND THE CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICER

About The Board:

The board and the CEO work together in a spirit of mutual confidence and respect for each other's area of responsibility.

Before deciding any matter, other than the CEO's contract, the board provides the CEO with ample opportunity to develop staff recommendation for action.

The board channels specific complaints and requests concerning the organization through the CEO.
About You, The Board Member:

A B C D  You request information through the CEO and not directly from staff members without the CEO's knowledge.

A B C D  You invite communications from the CEO and consider all background material he/she provides before you reach decisions.

V. THE BOARD AND THE PROGRAM OF WORK*

About The Board:

A B C D  The board is familiar with the organization's program of work.

A B C D  The board weighs all decisions in terms of what is best for those the organization serves.

A B C D  The board provides a policy on the organization's critical objectives and strategic plans, in partnership with staff, to achieve those objectives.

A B C D  The board from time to time evaluates the program of work in the light of objectives, and continually monitors progress toward critical objectives with the CEO.

About You, The Board Member:

A B C D  You try to keep abreast of new developments through reading, attendance of and participation in conferences and other meetings.

VI. THE BOARD AND ITS COMMUNITY RELATIONSHIPS

About The Board:

A B C D  The board, through a variety of means, encourages two-way communication with its "community".

About You, The Board Member:

A B C D  You listen to, and consider, the recommendations of "community" members, but guard your proper and vital decision-making responsibility.

VII. ROLES AND FUNCTIONS

About The Board:

A B C D  The board creates only those committees that are necessary to help it conduct its business; it has not dead or functionless committees, or committees that can carry out administrative assignments or responsibilities.

Program of Work refers to the functions and activities undertaken by the organization to accomplish its purposes.

Community refers to parties interested in, or able to affect, the success of the organization in achieving its purpose.

About You, The Board Member:

A B C D  You realize the board acts as a board and not itself make statements, decisions, or commitments on the board's behalf.

- EVALUATION CHECKLIST -

THE BENEFITS

... Evaluation requires that the board regularly review the job description of the Executive Director.

... Evaluation requires that the board be aware, or become more pointedly aware, of the full spectrum of the Executive Director's responsibilities.

... Evaluation requires that the board and the Executive Director be reminded of all of the objectives that have been set for the organization and how well or how poorly progress is being made towards those objectives.

... Evaluation provides the Executive Director with the opportunity to feed back to the board on those problems that are being faced in achieving the stated purpose of the organization.

... Evaluation provides a logical basis for decision making as to the Executive Director's future compensation.

... Evaluation can provide protection for the Executive Director against the adverse effects to be expected from an employer which holds a number of divergent views towards the nature and the goals of the Executive Director's job.

... Evaluation can contribute to the professional development of the Executive Director.

... Evaluation can provide another opportunity to keep members of the board of directors more intimately involved with the operation of the organization.

... Evaluation is one more means of assuring that the organization is serving its community to the best of its ability and available resources.
ELEMENTS IN OBJECTIVE SETTING

a. Objectives must be in writing, free of generalities or ambiguous language, with copies in the hands of all who are involved.

b. Objectives must produce specific results when accomplished.

c. Objectives should be set within definite time frames with specific dates for completion.

d. Whenever possible, an objective should be set up to contain benchmarks along the time frame from which progress may be measured.

e. All cost factors involved with the objective should be identified.

f. In setting an objective, refrain from any detailed discussion as to how it should be achieved.

g. Objectives should be consistent with the mission or purpose of the organization.

h. Objectives should be realistic, attainable and agreed to by all who are involved.

THE EVALUATION PROCESS

1. There is a current job description in existence - and it has been in existence over the period to be evaluated.

2. Objectives exist for the organization in accordance with the guidelines for objectives outlined above.

3. An evaluation team is appointed by the President usually consisting of the officers and committee (or key committee) chairs. If a small Executive Committee exists, it can be included on the evaluation team in toto. A large Executive Committee should probably be represented on the evaluation team. A total of from ten to fifteen individuals on the evaluation team is optimum; all of whom should have had reasonably frequent contact with the Executive Director over the period to be evaluated.
4. The Personnel Committee develops an evaluation checklist based upon the job description and organization objectives. Respondents (the evaluation team) will be asked to rate the Executive Director's performance against each line item on the checklist as follows:

5 - Outstanding
4 - Good. If better than what is expected.
3 - Adequate. No less/no more than what is expected.
2 - Poor. Less than what is expected.
1 - Unsatisfactory.

Space should be allowed on the checklist at each line item for comments should the respondents wish to make them.

5. This evaluation checklist is now mailed to each member of the evaluation team with a self addressed and stamped return envelope and a request to return the checklist to the Chairperson of the Personnel Committee within ten days. Respondents may or may not sign their individual checklists at their own option.

6. At the same time, a copy of the evaluation checklist is mailed to the Executive Director with a request for the Executive Director to complete it as a self evaluation and to hold it pending the evaluation conference with the President (step #9 below).

7. Once all of the checklists have been returned, the Chairperson of the Personnel Committee, acting alone, makes up a composite checklist which, by line item, indicates the number of responses for each numerical rating and randomly lists all comments made by members of the evaluation team without identification of the source of each comment. For example:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>TASK</th>
<th>RATING</th>
<th>COMMENTS</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Provides support to fund raising activities.</td>
<td>5 - 2  a) &quot;Highly creative.&quot;</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>4 - 10 b) &quot;Needs to improve relationship with United Way.&quot;</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>3 - 0  c) &quot;Good public speaker.&quot;</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>2 - 0</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>1 - 0</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>

The Personnel Committee Chairperson should then hold the individual evaluation checklists until the process is complete (step #11), after which the individual checklists should be destroyed.
Once the composite evaluation checklist is complete, there should be a closed meeting of the officers and the Chairperson of the Personnel Committee to discuss the composite evaluation. If a small Executive Committee exists, then it might be this body which meets to discuss the composite evaluation. If shortcomings are pointed out, and generally agreed upon, then a work improvement plan should be developed and this might require specific interim evaluations in the future. Performance consistently good to outstanding will suggest positive changes to compensation and appropriate recommendations to the board should be developed at this same meeting.

9. The President, alone, now meets with the Executive Director to discuss the evaluation, to compare the board's evaluation with the Executive Director's self evaluation, to discuss any work improvement plan which the evaluation process has suggested and, finally, to discuss any appropriate changes in the Executive Director's compensation.

Some feel that rather than meeting alone with the President, the Executive Director should meet with the same group which reviewed the composite evaluation checklist in Step #8 and each organization should choose the approach which seems most appropriate given the individuals involved.

10. Should the Executive Director be in serious disagreement with part or all of the evaluation, the right to respond to the Executive Committee, or to the evaluation team or to the full board must be available. Such a response should lead to a dialogue in which the problem area can be resolved in a candid and professional way.

11. Once full agreement has been reached, the final agreed upon evaluation should be signed by both the Executive Director and the President and then placed on file, readily available to all concerned.

安全管理问责制

通过实施管理问责制项目，协会展示了对实现、认可和奖励能力的强烈承诺。这种承诺激励所有工作人员，因为他们以相同的专业方式对待。协会有权期望他们在有效执行工作方面受到问责。建立管理问责制项目并要求专业人士对成功实施负责应被视为组织的首要任务。

安全管理问责制项目

安全管理问责制项目（MAP）使协会能够：
- 建立客观和实用的绩效评估；
- 将补偿与绩效有效性决策挂钩；
- 将评估和绩效认可与组织目标的实现挂钩。
MAP merges the association’s planning process with its appraisal of professional performance. If designed properly and implemented seriously, MAP provides a structure for purposeful and continuous attention to effectiveness. Performance is evaluated in a framework that promotes successful management and balanced attention to achievement of mission, efficient operations and successful personnel.

An effective management accountability program demonstrates nine important characteristics that represent goals every association has, or should have, regarding program management. These characteristics serve as a checklist for associations to use in evaluating current management planning and evaluation systems.

Collaborative decisionmaking.

MAP involves collaborative decisionmaking that results in shared accountability between all levels of the association. Critical objectives are identified through data collection, analysis, and discussion. Decisions about what needs to be accomplished are understood and owned by everyone. Plans for achieving identified objectives are developed systematically by the person responsible. He/she develops those plans with those who report to them and with their superior. Collaboration is built into decisionmaking procedures.
Merging planning and evaluation.
In management accountability programs, planning and evaluation activities are merged. Standards that will be used for measuring accomplishment of objectives are determined as part of the planning process.

The process of developing standards helps to clarify the objectives and to test the feasibility of plans proposed to achieve the objectives. The standards, suggested by the staff responsible, will be used to judge whether plans were implemented successfully and whether the implemented plans achieved their purpose.

Early warning system.
Because planning and evaluation activities are integrated, a management accountability program has a built in "early warning system." Formative evaluation lets planners, doers, and evaluators monitor whether plans are leading toward achieving stated objectives; it lets decisionmakers correct a plan during its use rather than waiting for it to fail. A management accountability program has an inherent bias toward success because it promotes continual adjustment of activities to improve the probability that desired outcomes will be achieved.
Coordinating activities.

MAP promotes coordination of activities among different units. Because planning and decisionmaking are collaborative in nature, and because written statements of objectives, measures, and plans are produced, each organizational unit understands what the other units are doing and why. This process increases the probability that the association's program priorities will not be ignored.

Clear and common understanding.

By coordinating activities among the association's units, MAP results in a clear and common understanding of "where we're going" and "how we'll get there." That promotes understanding of individual roles and commitment to the association's central objectives.

Focusing on critical objectives.

MAP enables an association to focus on its critical objectives without neglecting ongoing activities and programs that must be accomplished. Structured planning and evaluation, with a specific focus on outcomes that are defined collaboratively as most important, lets busy and complex associations attend to them. When objectives, plans, and measures are written, the association can demonstrate its success in achieving objectives defined as most important. The association is holding itself accountable for accomplishing priorities.
Preventing surprises during summative evaluation.

Because the MAP process is formative in nature, adjustments to action plans increase the probability that objectives will be achieved. If an objective is achieved partially or not at all, those involved in the planning, implementation, and formative monitoring of progress will know it far ahead of the final evaluation. In summative evaluation, the responsible staff member and superior know when an objective isn't being achieved and actions are probably underway already to respond.

Evaluation record.

The MAP approach to integrated planning and evaluation produces a clear and defensible record of performance by the association and by individuals. By linking management accountability to performance compensation, associations can establish both monetary and nonmonetary reward systems for effective performance. MAP also contributes to sound personnel decisions about selection, assignment, promotion and retention.

Time well spent.

Developing and executing a management accountability program takes time, but it is time well invested. Once professionals are trained in the skills needed to make the program work, it can be implemented and "debugged" in a "pilot" first year.
MAP soon becomes the accepted means for focusing continual attention on the achievement of important outcomes.

MAP is not just another "fad-dish" management technique. It takes full advantage of successful applications of several proven management techniques and weds them in a practical way. MAP significantly enhances the probability that association managers will be successful in achieving their declared and approved intentions.

LINKING MAP TO PERFORMANCE-RELATED COMPENSATION

Planning and evaluation accomplished according to MAP are compatible with performance-related compensation. In fact, an effective planning and performance appraisal system is the necessary foundation for performance-related compensation. All team members who are responsible for management, from the chief staff officer to program assistant, can participate in a management accountability program and its companion performance pay system.

Effective management accountability programs require commitment, clarity, and competence. Leadership must be accountable for ensuring that the management accountability program fulfills its purpose. That will require money, energy, and time. Leadership must see that staff is involved in developing the program so that staff will understand and support it.
The leadership must fund inservice training for all involved in developing and implementing the evaluation process. The training should include simulation, active involvement, practice and feedback, and it must be reinforced over time.

IMPLEMENTING MAP

The first step toward establishing a management accountability program is board and chief staff officer agreement on the critical objectives the association must address. Five to ten objectives are identified by the leadership after consultation with management team members, professional staff, and others.

The proposed objectives are reviewed with the board, modified if necessary, and approved. The chief staff officer and management team then develop action plans. These plans are a written summary of key events, responsibilities, and target dates involved in achieving the objectives. Simultaneously, the chief staff officer and management team propose indicators of achievement. These standards are the measures the board, top management, staff, and others will use to determine whether, or to what extent, the objectives were accomplished.
Action plans and indicators of achievement are reviewed by the board, modified by staff, and finally endorsed by the board. The association-wide critical objectives, action plans, and indicators provide a foundation for the development of unit and position responsibilities. Unit and position objectives should be compatible with the association-wide priorities and plans. They will also be related to more specific objectives and needs of the association, unit, or program.

A simplified portrait of the flow of objectives, action plans, and measures is shown in Figure 1. The process of setting critical objectives, identifying indicators of achievement, and developing action plans is accomplished at every level of the association. It occurs from the board and chief staff executive, to individual positions within a program. The development of objectives, indicators, and action plans at each level involves:

* the person or persons responsible for their achievement;
* the people who work with the person responsible;
* the responsible person’s superior.

This process of systematic decisionmaking and collaborative planning creates shared accountability for achieving objectives.
At the point that a staff member’s supervisor says, “The objective is important and the plan looks workable,” both the responsible staff member and that person’s supervisor share accountability for achieving the specified objective. The purpose of planning and evaluation becomes to achieve success instead of catching failure and chauvinizing performance.

The flow of events involved in monitoring progress is shown in Figure 2. The target dates established for key events in each action plan serve as triggers for formative evaluation of progress to date. The people accountable for achieving the objective are responsible for providing information to their supervisors about achievements, problems, and next steps at each critical point. Where adjustments are required, plans are modified.

This is not a cumbersome, paper intensive MBO system. Objectives and plans are not developed for everything the association is doing. Critical objectives represent priority outcomes that are most important to the association’s success.

In this way, MAP becomes a vehicle for tracking the need for changes in direction. The foundation of the appraisal system is adjusted at the same time that objectives or plans are altered. Inherent in management accountability programs is the ability to be current.

ACTION PLANS

The action plan is the basic tool and record of the management accountability program. Action plans are neither voluminous nor complex. They provide a simple summary of:

- objectives;
- indicators of achievement;
- major activities;
- target dates;
- staff responsibilities;
- resources required.

Figure 3 shows a format for an action plan. The objectives, action plans, and indicators of achievement link the planning and performance appraisal components of the MAP approach.

Executive Director Evaluation
THREE DIMENSIONS OF PROFESSIONAL PERFORMANCE

Effective evaluation of professional performance involves focusing constructively on strengths, competencies, and needs in three related dimensions of the job. Traditionally, evaluation focuses on one, or at best two, of these three equally important and interactive aspects of responsibility. (See Figure 4).

Dimension One: Progress Toward Cooperatively Determined Objectives.
Performance is appraised on the basis of whether the professional is accomplishing specified and approved goals. This portion of the evaluation is accomplished through continuous review and modification of action plans and review of the predetermined "indicators of achievement" at summative evaluation. This first dimension is a direct link between the system's planning process and performance appraisal. The key question we are asking and answering is "Are we accomplishing our goals?"

Dimension Two: Fulfillment of Job Responsibilities.
Position descriptions and specific criteria developed to define job responsibilities are used to answer the question "Are we doing the job?". While the first dimension focuses on the extent to which specific outcomes or job targets are achieved, this dimension focuses on successful fulfillment of routine functions and responsibilities.
How individuals fulfill job responsibilities and outcome objectives are related, but they are not the same. Job responsibilities are functional in nature. Critical objectives describe outcomes or products that will result from fulfilling job responsibilities. In this dimension, evaluation of performance is based on statements of job responsibility and criteria.

The development of criteria for job responsibilities clarifies the position for both professional and supervisor. It encourages common expectations for performance. It also provides a sound foundation for employee selection and promotion decisions.

Dimension Three: Demonstration of Professional Competencies.
The manner in which the professional goes about fulfilling job responsibilities to achieve outcome objectives must be examined. "How are we doing the job?" is the focus of this appraisal of behavioral characteristics.

There are many ways to list and appraise competencies. One method that provides a constructive link to professional development involves describing behaviors that characterize various levels of professional competence. In this approach, major areas of competency are identified. Each competency is described further by a series of statements. Each statement portrays a level of behavior that can be exhibited in a particular competency.
Staff members evaluate how they view their competence by selecting a sentence that most accurately reflects their own view of their behavior. Their supervisor reviews the self-appraisal and indicates areas of agreement or disagreement. Areas of disagreement are discussed. Specific competencies that need development are identified. A professional development plan is authored by the staff member and supervisor to address those competencies.

Self-appraisal is a sound way to encourage professionals to review their behavior and identify areas needing development. For example, areas of competence might include:
* human relations
* communications
* delegation
* problem solving
* etc.

Several sentences describing varying levels of competence would be written for each area identified. Under the heading "delegation," for example, four sentences might be useful:
* Always delegates the right things to the right people, effectively monitors progress, and ensures successful completion.
Usually delegates the right things to the right people, sometimes monitors progress, and usually achieves success.

* Seldom delegates or often delegates to the wrong people, and sometimes does not monitor progress. Seldom achieves success with delegated tasks.

* Rarely delegates or delegates to the wrong people. Never monitors progress and delegated tasks are never completed.

Many instruments of this type exist. Each association should review examples and adapt them to their own needs and values. Although associations sometimes shy away from addressing behavioral competencies, focusing on this dimension of performance constructively is essential. Staff members must be able to understand how to refine their behaviors to do their jobs better. When they do, it is more probable that critical objectives will be accomplished. This review affirms the values of the association. It reinforces the importance of those values to execution of strategies selected to pursue the association's objectives.

SUMMATIVE EVALUATION OF PERFORMANCE

The three dimensions of professional performance are the basis for annual summative evaluation. This overall appraisal uses judgements about each of the three related aspects of performance.

In summative evaluation, achievement of objectives is evaluated. Decisions are made, on the basis of the predetermined indicators of achievement, about whether objectives are achieved, partially achieved, or not achieved. Where objectives are not achieved or are achieved partially, the professional indicates "why". The staff member's evaluator must decide whether the explanation is satisfactory.

The extent to which job responsibilities are accomplished also is evaluated on the basis of predetermined criteria. Areas of strength, areas of competence where there is room for growth, and areas that need remediation are identified. The basis of performance judgments is also reviewed. The reasons for judgments are related to predetermined and approved criteria for each job responsibility. Specific job-related improvement objectives can be determined and professional development plans written.
Behavioral competencies also are appraised by the staff member and the supervisor. Areas requiring further professional development are identified and specific objectives and professional development plans are written. The staff member and supervisor can share and understand their respective views of the manner in which the professional is carrying out job responsibilities and accomplishing position objectives.

The supervisor and staff member also can examine the supervisor's role and the relationship of the supervisor's activities to the staff member's ability to perform effectively. This process promotes honest discussion of the performance dimension that most often is the source of dissatisfaction and disagreement between staff member and supervisor.

The staff member's supervisor makes a summative judgment about the overall quality of performance within each of the three dimensions. These judgments provide the basis for a single summative judgment about the overall quality of performance during a given evaluation period.
USING PERFORMANCE INCREMENTS

Performance-related compensation is distributed according to whether performance is classified as "outstanding", "competent", or "unsatisfactory." (Terms such as "exceeds expectations", "meets expectations" and "does not meet expectations" can also be used.) Performance increments are earned above the "normal" salary increase. Professionals know that if their performance is judged as outstanding or competent, they will receive a performance increment of a certain percent of the midpoint of their salary range in addition to any regular increment. The salary of a staff member whose performance is rated unsatisfactory is frozen. No raise of any type is awarded. Salary remains the same until satisfactory improvement is achieved or termination in the position occurs.

In many programs, the performance increment is a one time lump sum cash bonus awarded at the end of a performance period. It does not become part of the base salary. Sometimes other stable points in salary ranges (such as maximums, quartiles or minimums) are used as the base for calculating the performance award. Many associations avoid awarding a percent of current salaries so that the earned bonus is based on current performance, and not a salary level reached by performance in the past.
This approach works particularly well in associations that evaluate their compensation programs for market comparability and cost-of-living changes at least semi-annually. Salary schedules are rationally adjusted to attract and retain the human talent the organization requires.

PROBLEMS AND PITFALLS

Associations should avoid complicated performance-related compensation programs. Attempts to (a) weigh the difficulty or importance of objectives, (b) reflect increased difficulty or importance related to level of responsibility or (c) quantify measures of effectiveness or their application are usually unnecessary and counterproductive.

Differences in job responsibilities should be reflected in the base salary schedule. In this way, associations determine a salary related to the job, not a salary related to the individual. Ranges and steps within ranges can reflect such variables as longevity and formal training appropriately.

Performance-related compensation, using the performance increment, is a simple and straightforward way to accomplish the incentive purposes of merit pay. It avoids the major pitfalls and problems that can inhibit development or successful implementation of a reasonable and practical system.
It is important for the association to remember the primary purposes of performance-related compensation:

- to recognize competent performance with money;
- to signal unsatisfactory performers of dissatisfaction by withholding monetary recognition;
- to provide additional recognition to outstanding performers that identifies them as models for others and encourages others to strive for additional recognition.

Achieving the primary purpose of performance pay, positively affecting the quality of a staff member's performance, requires only simple recognition of outstanding, competent, and unsatisfactory performance. Systems that require classification of performance into too many categories require judgments about differences in performance that are too specific to be reasonably defensible. Overly complicated systems are, in fact, counterproductive to the primary purposes of professional compensation systems. As long as outstanding and competent performance are recognized monetarily, and unsatisfactory performance is penalized, associations are linking money earned to performance effectiveness appropriately.
THE BOARD'S ROLE IN PERFORMANCE APPRAISAL AND COMPENSATION

Boards have a special role in management evaluation and performance-related compensation programs. The board should participate actively in the association-wide planning and appraisal components of the management accountability program. The nature of board interaction with the chief staff officer in developing and implementing MAP at the organizational level serves as a model of the values and behaviors other staff members should emulate.

The board interacts with the C.S.O. in developing objectives, indicators of achievement, and action plans. This interaction will be replicated by the C.S.O. and the management team, and then between management team members and their staff. The board must support the effort and demonstrate its commitment to sharing accountability with staff. Staff often judge the real importance of efforts based on how much time and money the "boss" and the "board" spend on it.
C.S.O. ACCOUNTABILITY

A management accountability program enables the board to merge organizational planning with its performance appraisal of the chief staff officer. This is accomplished through performance evaluation policies and procedures that evaluate the C.S.O.'s performance on the basis of:

- progress toward predetermined objectives as measured by predetermined indicators of achievement;
- demonstration of position skills, responsibilities and/or competencies as measured by criteria and competency descriptors;
- the board's self-evaluation of its own effectiveness and the extent to which its performance affected the ability of the C.S.O. to accomplish the designated objectives and responsibilities.

Figure 5 lists the nine steps involved in the interaction between the board and the C.S.O. that merge organizational planning with C.S.O. evaluation. Figure 6 shows the flow of events involved in linking job responsibilities of the C.S.O. to evaluation.
Position objectives, responsibilities, and competencies as demonstrated by the C.S.O., are evaluated by the board in consultation with the C.S.O. The C.S.O. uses the same process when evaluating how all senior staff have accomplished their job. In this way, the board and C.S.O. demonstrate their commitment to using formative performance evaluation. The foundation for judgements about effectiveness can be defended and related properly to decisions about compensation.

BOARD ACCOUNTABILITY

Board self-evaluation demonstrates symbolically and tangibly the board’s commitment to performance appraisal as a constructive mechanism for promoting continued improvement. The board’s willingness and demeanor in evaluating itself will say more to association staff about the integrity of evaluation and compensation policies than any verbal or written declarations. Figure 7 shows the seven steps involved in developing and conducting a board self-appraisal.

Association Planning and CSO Evaluation Merge
One good approach is to use board self-examination as the final event in the association's annual summative evaluation. Because planning and evaluation are cyclical, board self-evaluation can serve simultaneously as the first and last event in the planning/evaluation cycle. This activity provides an opportunity for the board and C.S.O. to begin discussions about problems, issues, and needs that will serve as the basis for recommended critical objectives for the next year. Planning and evaluation activities are merged in fact, not just in theory.

THE MAP CYCLE

The MAP process recycles (or starts) with a board/staff strategic planning session. One to two days dedicated to planning activities. Such a meeting often involves seven activities:

1. Examine the essential characteristics of effective planning in Associations.

2. Clarify the Association’s mission statement.

3. Review previous planning material and program evaluations.

4. Conduct a strategic analysis to identify the Association’s internal and external strengths, weaknesses, threats and opportunities; current and future.

5. Identify strategic issues.

6. Determine the Association’s response to the identified issues.

7. Establish critical objectives.
A report, summarizing decisions is authored following the program. The critical objectives are further developed by staff. Action plans to achieve the objectives are authored for Board review at subsequent meetings, and the next cycle is underway.

The planning techniques used at the session should enable board members and key staff to actively participate, in an organized fashion, in shaping the future of the Association. Experience affirms the importance of policy makers and managers working as partners in planning. This approach takes advantage of various perspectives and information bases and promotes effective translation of intent into action.

MAP is a practical approach that can link long-range and annual planning, program evaluation, performance appraisal, compensation and budgeting. Specific procedures will be refined and evolve over time. Once operating, however, it becomes an "organizational lifestyle" that demonstrates commitment to achieving, recognizing and rewarding effectiveness.
