

Call for Manuscripts Deadline: February 1

The editors of The Language and Literacy Spectrum, the journal of the New York State Reading Association, invite submissions of manuscripts for peer review. We define literacy broadly to include reading, writing, listening, speaking, viewing, and creating in many different modes and for many different purposes in order to interact with the world.

The Language and Literacy Spectrum is a peer-reviewed journal published annually and available online. The readership consists primarily of practicing teachers and literacy specialists. The editors welcome manuscripts focused on classroom practice, research, and theory in literacy. We encourage submissions from practitioners, literacy researchers, and presenters from the NYSRA conference.

Manuscripts may be submitted here
<http://digitalcommons.buffalostate.edu/lis/>

Before you begin to submit a manuscript for review, please be sure you have the following items

- Article title
- An abstract (separate from the article body)
- Manuscript in Microsoft Word format (with no page numbers)

Jennifer Reichenberg and Keli Garas-York
Co-Editors
The Language and Literacy Spectrum